In this series of talks, we want to show students what kind of career opportunities a degree in Islamic and Middle Eastern Studies can open up for them.

Our first guest is Laura Cappon, an award-winning journalist who studied Oriental Languages and Cultures at the University of Bologna and lived in Cairo between 2011 and 2015. In July 2016 she participated in the creation of the RAI 1 news special entitled Giulio Regeni, the body of the crime and she is the author, together with Gianluca Constantini, of Patrick Zaki. Una storia egiziana. Currently she is a correspondent for RAI (Italian Radio and Television) programs.

She will talk about her journey from an MA in our field to becoming a journalist.
